Baby Abandoned In Subway Gets Two Motor Rides

Girl Who Finds Child Gives It Auto Trip, Police Another.

A girl three weeks old took what was probably her first automobile ride early to-day, also her first—and it is hoped, her last—ride in a police patrol. She will be anonymous in this story because if she has a name the police do not know it.

Miss Emily Cunningham, twenty-two years old, of No. 327 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, was in the Manhattan-bound subway station at 25th Street, Brooklyn, last midnight when she heard a faint cry. She found a baby, wrapped in a blanket and dressed in white. She went to the street, hailed an automobile and took the baby to the Fourth Avenue Police Station. "Officers," said Lieut. Billy Fife on hearing Mrs. Cunningham's story, "assemble for roll call."

The men in the back room lined up. "I have an important mission for one of you, and it is well that he should be married to handle the subject properly. Any volunteers?" Several men stepped forward. Police Officer George Wedman was selected and the Lieutenant reached under the desk and produced the baby, which began to cry.

Eighty of the "rookie" patrolmen went to the Clinton Street Station and twenty to the Fifth Street Station.
